This blog post is all about the perfect macaron template and outline for piping the macaron batter onto. This post contains affiliate links. That means I'll receive a commission if you purchase through my link, at no extra cost to you. Please read the full disclosure HERE. Macarons are one of the most prettiest and delectable desserts we've ever experienced. They are dainty, colorful, and delicious. Macarons are an extra special treat because they are considered a fancy French dessert that tends to be costly. Macarons are often found on the dessert table of special events. So it's great to have at a bridal shower or even a wedding. There is a downside to this beautiful little sandwich. They tend to be very funny acting if you don't get the steps to make them correct. They are, some would say, very difficult to make. We have decided to make the macaron creation process as seamless as possible for you. No, we will not tell you how to make them (oh heavens no)! We will leave that to the experts on tasty.com. We know that they'll lead you in the right direction. What we will do for you is provide a number of macaroon printables to use when making your dessert. We have carefully measured out and we're certain we've created great templates and printables for macarons. In this blog post, we will review some different macaron outlines. We will talk about the science of macaron piping on templates. By the end of this article, you will have a better way to shape your macaroons and will be able to print from the resources we provide. Why should you use a printable macaron template? Are you about to bake some macarons for a birthday party? Or maybe you want to make some fresh macarons for a special occasion or event? Then use a template! It serves as a guide for measuring the perfect size macaron. A macaron template will not only help you bake some fresh macarons but will help make them the same dimension so that when they're put together they match up. This is a trick that beginners or experts could use to control how they distribute the batter on the pan. Templates are great to use before you bake the macarons because the areas on the template are spaced out. There will be enough room for the macarons to rise and expand and they won't get stuck together. Some supporting materials for the macaron template Some materials to use alongside this printable are obviously a baking sheet, piping bag, and nozzle. The best size nozzle for 1.5 or 2-inch macarons is 0.25 piping tips. You will also need some parchment paper for the actual batter and for the printable to go underneath it. There are also silicone mats that could help make the macarons come out perfect. The main thing is to have a foundation (baking sheet), a visual guide (template) to keep you focused, and a barrier between the visual guide and the piping bag (parchment paper). Printable Macaron Templates Here are the 4 macaron templates we've created. Use them for your family or for big events. The choice is completely yours. Scroll through the sizes and see which one you like the best. These printables are PDF files. And the measurement of the images is true to size. All you have to is click the image to view the media file, then go to the upper right corner of the page to print. Now let's look at the different templates... 1.5 Inch Macaron template If you are looking for a basic template ideal for a regular-size macaron, then this would be the best template to use. We love this template idea for a small family who wants a dessert. This printable has space for 12 macarons. The target "+" is where you would start piping the batter round and round until you've reached the first line of the circle. With this size and with a 0.25" piping nozzle, it should take 1.5 or 2 swirls of piping. Copy of 1.5 Inch Macaron Piping TemplateDownload Here is a blank copy of this template without the targets for more advance hands dealing with piping. 2 Inch Macaron Template A 2-inch macaron template is a great tool to use for special events and occasions. Since they are slightly larger, they look great as a macaron tower or in gift boxes. These are popular at bridal showers and other formal events because they look more formal than cupcakes. We also have a blank copy of the 2 inch macaron template with no targets. Pick which ever you prefer. Heart shaped printable macaron template How exactly do you hide a heart-shaped macaron? We've got the process for this step-by-step. Using a medium tip gently squeeze a dollop of macaroon batter in the upper round corner of the heart. We have marked this area on the first heart of our template. Pipe steadily on a slant while decreasing the amount of pressure as you move further down. There is an arrow to indicate the stopping point on the heart. Know that if the batter doesn't fill up the entire space you should leave it because it will be spread in a future step. You want to repeat on the second half of the heart. The trick to getting the heart-shaped correct is that you need to stop typing quickly a way to stop typing faster so quickly move the tip upward toward the center. Your heart-shaped macaron does not look perfect at this point and that is where the final step comes in. The last step is to use a toothpick to pop and smooth out any air pockets. Copy of 2 Inch Macaron Piping TemplateDownload Which one did you pick? We want to hear from you before or after you bake macarons. Which printable macaron template did you choose for your supplies? How did they come out? Please tell us what you think in the comments. When I was wedding planning, I dug around online for hours trying to find the right Indian wedding planning checklist as if it would appear out of thin air. After page 5 of searching through Google results, I stopped looking. The checklists on the big sites included irrelevant items and then there were the random Indian sites that apparently had checklists. I found some lists I could've written before I knew anything about Indian wedding planning. Some seemed promising at first. I downloaded five checklists and printed out two, feeling desperate for a checklist. I had good intention to use them all. Some were too broad, and some were just not relevant. Yes, I have to decide on my bridal party – but there are more crucial items to figure out first. Next... What if my wedding isn't 12 months from now and it's closer than that? I felt my heart beating faster. Next... I'm not having a rehearsal dinner or a one-day event. Next... I love lists but 100 items? Ugh, that's way too overwhelming. The first line gets processed and then your mind goes into "oh I'll just figure it out" mode. The idea of figuring it out is amazing in theory, but when you get to logistics, it'll bite you in the behind. "Wait – I can't pick out my dream menu BEFORE I find out if the venue even allows outside catering? Oh..." Whether you're getting married in 6 months or 2 years, this wedding planning checklist is one list that won't stress you out. It's a wedding planning checklist for any kind of Indian wedding and can be used for a fusion Indian wedding too. Use the checklist in combination with a more detailed wedding checklist [that'll be unique to your wedding]. Keep the information organized. [I heart google docs and as a bride, you can't live without it!] Click here for a FREE PDF download of the Indian Wedding Planning Checklist Click here for a FREE PDF download of the Indian Wedding Planning Checklist Here's how to customize the Indian wedding planning checklist: High Level – Discuss with Partner: Start with the high-level big picture with your partner FIRST Discuss the high-level with both families Come to a decision about the high level with your partner. Desires / Priorities: What does each partner want? Now is the time to talk about your ideal wedding, and what you both want the most. Example – Groom: Live music at reception Bride: High-end food that includes cuisine from all over the world End Result: A three-course black tie "gala" type reception with a band Budget: This one can get complicated. Discuss who's paying for what, are you – the couple – paying for the bulk of the wedding? Do you want to (or have to) pay for the wedding? Or are parents helping out? Don't assume A-N-Y-T-H-I-N-G – talk about it! Number of events: Do you want the Big Fat Indian wedding? Or do you want to keep things simple with only one-pre-wedding event? It's crucial for the couple to get on the same page before you discuss anything with families. Guest count: This one gets tricky. Discuss your desired headcount together first, then bring in the family opinions. [Brace yourself...] Location: Destination wedding or a local? In Bride's hometown or where you currently live? As you discuss, think about the factors that come into play with each location. Venue type: Think high level. Do you want a venue with outdoor space? Allows outside catering? Traditional wedding hall or non-traditional space? Now, move onto the discussing with families: High Level – Discuss with Families: Go through each high-level step again, this time with your family. Depending on your family dynamics (or logistics of where they're located), it could be better to have a meeting with each family first, and then come together to discuss decisions. High-Level Outcome: From the outcome of the High-Level items, move onto two items. Venue: At this point, you have enough information to look at venues that meet your needs (water view, outside catering allowed, etc). Pick your wedding venue based on criteria You requirements (outdoor area for cocktail hour, view of lake, etc) Outside catering allowed (if you don't want to use their catering options) Allows Indian weddings (ie small fire on mandap for ceremony, Baraat outside, etc) What services are included (cake, wedding coordinator, lighting etc) Do they offer package deals for multiple events? Website / Save the Dates: Once you have your venue, date, and events, you can start building out a wedding website and explore save the dates. TIP: As you move through the process, keep your guests in mind first. [For example: If your bapuji (grandfather) can't climb stairs, don't pick a vineyard in the mountains that doesn't accommodate handicap access.] Primary Vendors – Research: At this point, you'll have a good understanding of what you want. Now is when you want to nail down the main vendors. Caterers: At this stage, the important criteria are the types of menus the caterer can provide – including hors d'oeuvres, dinner and dessert, and cost per person (and kids). Added Bonus: Check if the caterer has a history with the venue. If they've worked together before, you'll likely make out better when it comes to permits, logistics and even flexibility of options since both parties already have a working relationship. Check out the post on How to Create the Perfect Menu for your Indian wedding for more tips on selecting a caterer and a menu. Decor (Mandap, linens, fabrics): Picking out a decorator was easy for me because I didn't have a ton of options. What takes longer after the initial decision is deciding what you want. Worry about picking a decorator first but check out selections before you make a decision. Save the details for later. What matters most is that the decorator can provide what you want and can work easily with a florist to coordinate your design ideas. Florist: In my opinion, there are great florists out there and there are OK florists out there. Vet florists by checking out their designs from other weddings. It helps when the florist has already done an Indian wedding. They know what to expect when it comes to providing flowers for the ceremony and other small flower-related details. You may want to consider a florist who will repurpose flowers from one event to another (makes it easier on your budget). Photo/Video: Indian weddings require photographers/videographers who've already shot Indian weddings. No arguments there. Find someone who is willing to shoot the style you're looking for and inquire about multiple events up front. TIP: Don't forget about an engagement shoot (if you want one). Many photographers will create a better package if you decide to include engagement photos in the package. Hair / Makeup: Getting references is very important here, so do your research. Ask about pricing by event. If you're getting hair/makeup done for your bridal party, now's the time to inquire about location of services and pricing. Read the post on How to Pick the Right Indian Wedding Hairstyles. DJ /Music: Here's another place to get references. It all depends on what you want. Do you want a band one night and a DJ another? Confirm if he/she can also serve as the MC (if you want) and if you can see them in action (at another event). For the DJ, inquire about Baraat services in addition to the reception (or other event). If you're planning to bring in a DJ or band from another city, they'll usually require a hotel stay before the event. Secondary Vendors – Research: Now that the main vendors are squared away, focus on next tier. Clothes: Ah the big question – where are you going shopping? There are many options in the US and Canada these days in addition to India and the UK. Don't forget about online shopping options if you can't travel for shopping. Check out the Resources page for shopping ideas. Bakery: Your wedding venue might already have a preferred vendor. You can use them or choose your own. Check out the post How to Choose a Breathtaking Indian Wedding Cake – for a free list of printable questions to ask your bakery before ordering. Priest: You can outsource this task to your parents. If you're having a fusion wedding, make sure the priest is aware of what your events will be. TIP: Don't forget to get a priest who can also speak English. It helps when he can explain each step of the wedding to the guests as the ceremony progresses. It also helps keep your guests engaged. Mehndi: Ask family and friends for references. This is the best way to find a mehndi artist because a lot of them work by word of mouth (re: no website or way to find them online). I used a non-Indian mehndi artist and she was incredible. Ask your artist if she uses natural mehndi (and what brand). Shockingly many artists don't use natural mehndi. Check out the post on Everything You Need to Know about Indian Bridal Mehndi for more tips. Invitations: There are lots of online sites to pick from – Indian and non-Indian. Once you have the event details squared away, you can start plugging away on the invitations. TIP: Consider online RSVPs to minimize the cost of mailing out RSVP cards (not to mention it's easier to keep a track of responses). Lighting (Venue): Check with your venue about how they set up lighting. They usually have a person in charge of lighting who you'll work with. Ask them to set up the actual lighting for your events. Talking about lighting is a totally different experience than seeing what the end product will be in real life. Hotel & Transportation: If you venue isn't a hotel, venue staff will usually have some discounts to close-by hotels. Ask the hotel about transportation to and from the venue. Otherwise, look into shuttle services before, during and after each event. Groom Transportation: Whether you choose a horse, a fancy car, or another mode of transportation for the Groom to make his grand entrance, now's the time to research your options. Don't forget about the vidhai (exit). If you want to do the grand exit, you'll need a vehicle to leave in! Get Moving: Here's where you want to make sure everything is jiving. Schedule/Timeline for each event: Use google docs to work out a schedule / timeline for each event. You'll have help from your venue coordinator, but fill in details that he/she won't account for. For example, if something needs to happen between events, note that in the timeline so you can assign a [trusted] person to complete the task. TIP: Use Google Drive / Doc / Sheets to organize all information and to easily share it out with your family. Check out these posts and the resources section for tips on how to organize information for wedding planning. How to Think Like an Indian Wedding Planner 10 Revealing Places Indian Brides Forget to Look for Help Indian Wedding Resources Menus: Check out the post on How to Create the Perfect Menu for your Indian wedding. Home Events Planning: If you're planning to rent a tent, tables, and chairs, now's the time to do it. You can be creative with decorating your home for the events. Check out the resources section for shopping ideas. Honeymoon Planning: This is a good task to outsource to your fiancée (if you want). That way, it'll be a surprise for you (and you'll have time to focus on wedding planning!). TIP: If you're not planning to change your last name until after the wedding (if at all), book flights using your current / maiden name. The Details – Smaller Details but Important Tasks: Here's where you'll be tying up loose ends before the big day. Marriage License: It might not make sense to get your marriage license after you're officially married especially if you're traveling on your honeymoon and potentially traveling back to where you live (which might be a different place than where your wedding took place). You could get "court married" before the wedding for the sake of convenience. Research the details in your state. Delegated Tasks – "Day of coordinator": For Indian weddings, it's crucial that you have a "day of coordinator" handling the last minute details. Whether you decide to hire a coordinator or not, you should still have that "go-to" person who the coordinator can use as a resource. It could be your maid of honor, sister, brother, cousin or whoever you trust to manage details over your wedding weekend. Payments: Get payments ready ahead of time to provide vendors at your event. Delegate this task to a brother or dad. Clearly mark envelopes with names and amounts. TIP: Remind the groom to have envelopes of cash ready for the bride's sisters and friends who'll line up in front of your vehicle during the vidhai. Weekend Packing: This isn't any vacation where you're stuffing a suitcase. TIP: Pack one bag per event to keep each event's clothes, jewelry and accessories organized. Include backup options in the rare [but possible] chance you lose anything. Other items: There will be other things to do in addition to this list as you progress through the list. Use this Indian wedding planning checklist as a frame and then work details as you move through the process. Many of these items can happen simultaneously after you've secured your vendors. Other considerations that get overlooked: Expectations and Compromising: While you go through this process, keep in mind that parents and other family members will have certain expectations around your wedding. Try to level set the expectations from the beginning.
